The Bedrock of Survival and Grace

For many, the Black church is their house of worship. For some, it is ground zero for social justice. For others, it is a place of transcendent cultural gifts exported to the world, from the soulful voices of preachers and congregants, to the sublime sounds of gospel music.

In a new two-part series, Dr. Henry Louis Gates, Jr., traces the 400-year-old story of the Black church in America. The documentary reveals how Black people have, through their spiritual journeys, improvised ways to bring their faith traditions from Africa to the New World, while translating them into a form of Christianity that was not only truly their own, but a redemptive force for a nation whose original sin was found in their ancestors' enslavement across the Middle Passage.

"Our series is a riveting and systematic exploration of the myriad ways in which African Americans have worshipped God in their own images, and continue to do so today, from the plantation and prayer houses, to camp meetings and store-front structures, to mosques and mega-churches," says Dr. Gates. "This is the story and song our ancestors bequeathed to us, and it comes at a time in our country when the very things they struggled and died for — faith and freedom, justice and equality, democracy and grace — all are on the line. No social institution in the Black community is more central and important than the Black church."

NEPM Mentors Middle Schoolers

In partnership with Springfield Public Schools and the Latino Education Institute, NEPM's Education Team has been leading a virtual media literacy enrichment class during the school day at Duggan Academy, giving middle schoolers the chance to engage with professionals in the field of journalism.

Students are learning basic media skills, producing their own stories, conducting interviews, sharing stories, building musical beats, and creating dialogue in a bilingual approach to English and Spanish languages.

NEPM Media Lab Project Director Iohann Vega-Martinez has been thrilled with the progress. "Our students have been having fun while learning the fundamentals of storytelling. We also have been learning a lot from them, especially on how to adapt to the virtual environment in creative and ingenious ways."

WFCR → NEPR → NEPM

Martin Miller's 25th Anniversary

In 1995, Martin Miller took the helm of WFCR 88.5, which aired NPR news programs during drive times, classical music during the day, and jazz in the evening.

In 2007, when many public radio stations were dropping music programming in favor of news and talk, Martin orchestrated a solution with the acquisition of WNNZ AM. The station could provide news programming on one channel while remaining faithful to its music-loving audience on WFCR. With the eventual expansion to 13 frequencies, and a new website, a new name was in order. In 2011, New England Public Radio was born.

Then, in 2019, New England Public Radio and WGBY Television announced that they would merge to create a new multi-media organization, which would be better positioned to serve the region — New England Public Media.

As President, Martin is now leading the process to expand NEPM's reach by investing in new people, new platforms, new infrastructure, and new services. The future is bright!

Thousands Agree. Words Matter.

And now, with over 200 thousand downloads, we know it's a national hit! Word Matters takes listeners behind the scenes of the English language as Merriam-Webster editors discuss new and emerging words, surprising word histories, tricky usage issues, pet peeves, and everything that goes into writing The Dictionary.

Hosted by Emily Brewster, Senior Editor and Editorial Ambassador for Merriam-Webster, Word Matters invites listeners to eavesdrop on conversations Emily and fellow editors Peter Sokolowski, Ammon Shea, and Neil Serven have about the language's inner workings.
